Summer experiences capital punishment first-hand

by Will Floyd in News

In any line of work, a person can occasionally be asked to go beyond the call of duty and do something that can be described as "not in the job description." For Dr. Greg Sumner, associate professor of criminal justice at Georgia Highlands, being asked to view a capital punishment execution was one of those things... Post the First Comment

The large rock that sits between the Walraven Building and the gym was donated by Florida Rock Quarry.

Rock is more than decoration

by Nick Godfrey in Features

Between the Walraven Building and the gym, there is a large boulder that students walk by daily without even noticing. Believe it or not, there's a story behind this rock. The rock came from the now closed Florida Rock Quarry on Redmond Road. "We used to take field trips to the quarry, and the plant manager donated it and had it delivered to campus in a dump truck," said Billy Morris, associate professor of geology.... Clayton Jones, an instructor by day and a Mad Poet by night

by LaTonya Burrell in Entertainment

Clayton Jones, instructor of English, walks into his classroom as students quickly print off and gather materials to prepare for class. The topic of the lecture is how to approach epic poems. Jones engages his students by giving a brief background about the author before getting into the poem and presenting audio visual material pertaining to the author.

GHC student and HSA vice president raises awareness for DREAM Act

by Eric Benavidez in Features

Orlando Ramos arrived in the United States when he was only three years old. He nearly lost his life crossing the Rio Grande. He has lived in this country ever since, keeping his grades up, working part-time and pursuing a higher degree towards a good career.

Food may be coming soon to GHC

by Lesley Mathis in News

The students at Georgia Highlands have gone a whole year without food available for them on campus, but if everything goes according to plan, they may be able to stay on school property for lunch next year. Cynthia Parker, procurement officer at GHC, has said that she is hoping to have a request for proposals posted before the fall semester of next year.

McDaniel wins Six Mile Post Ping-Pong Tourney

by Nick Godfrey in Sports

Jonathan McDaniel beat Tyler Ashley, winning a two-game shut out 21-11 and 21-18 in Six Mile Post's first ever ping-pong tournament finale, after a long season of ping-pong tournament battles. The trash-talking started almost as soon as McDaniel and Ashley started playing.
